Fund Commentary

Whilst we typically pen this commentary as at the period end (in this case the 31st March), significant geo-political events have of course unfolded soon afterwards, warranting a post-dated narrative.

Stockmarkets enjoyed a strong start to 2025, with various global markets hitting record highs in the first quarter, including the UK (FTSE 100), the US (S&P500) and Europe (Euro Stoxx). However, the pace at which this bullish investor sentiment has unravelled is not far off unprecedented.

On April 2nd, Trump and his loyal disciples celebrated 'Liberation Day', with the announcement of a sweeping set of tariffs, effected by way of an 'Executive Order' (extraordinary powers wielded by the President), bringing the US 'effective tariff' rate to its highest level since 1910. Whilst the notion of reciprocal tariffs was well signposted by Trump's team, the scale of the tariff increases (and indeed the calculation of the reciprocity) was not.

Whilst Trump has grand long-term visions as to the impact of the tariffs, effectively re-balancing the world order, economic theory (and indeed tried and tested history) would suggest that tariffs will slow economic growth and damage the US (and in doing so global) economy, whilst likely leading to higher consumer prices, at least in the short term.

Global markets have therefore reacted sharply to the news, reflecting concerns around:

- Disrupted global supply chains: Tariffs can significantly disrupt intricate global supply chains, leading to increased costs and inefficiencies for multinational corporations.
- Reduced corporate profitability: Increased import costs and potential retaliatory tariffs from other nations can impact profit margins.
- Geopolitical uncertainty: The tariffs have heightened geopolitical tensions, creating uncertainty about future trade relations and economic stability.
- Investor sentiment: Fear and uncertainty have driven a shift in investor sentiment, leading to a flight to safety and a sell-off in 'risk assets' like equities.

Interestingly, a number of Trump's most ardent supporters (and indeed financial backers) have been, carefully, sounding increasing alarm. As Jamie Dimon, CEO of JP Morgan, put it "America First is fine, as long as it doesn't end up being America alone." Ultimately, it has been the financial market's reaction, and most significantly perhaps the US government debt market's reaction, which has forced Trump to soften his stance (slightly), sticking to a 10% baseline tariff for all (bar China, notably, for which the trade war rages on), but offering a 90 day reprieve for any more punitive tariffs.

In the coming months, we can expect continued volatility in both policy and financial markets, as global trading arrangements are re-negotiated. Portfolio diversification will remain key and we will continue to act pro-actively in our management of the fund, maintaining a focus on the long term.

Fund Objective & Policy

The investment objective of the Fund is to provide long-term (5 – 10 years) growth through a combination of capital and income, with an emphasis on capital.

The fund adopts a global investment approach, unconstrained by a formal benchmark, with a diversified exposure to a range of asset classes including equities (both UK and global), fixed interest (corporate bonds), alternatives (including infrastructure, real estate and private equity) and cash.

Typically at least 75% of the fund will be exposed to equities.

Investment Approach

The Fund's exposure is primarily achieved by investing in collective investments (including investment trusts, OEICs and ETFs).

The blend of active and passive strategies seeks to maximise returns, whilst minimising costs.

The funds are invested on a long-term basis, with low expected portfolio turnover.

Strategic asset allocation is a core focus given the associated contribution to long term investment returns, whilst helping to mitigate risk. Tactical asset allocation will enable flexibility to adjust to changing market conditions.
